LINCOLN'S GOOSE-NEST HOME Story of a Man Who Slept One Night with Abe.

Near the graveyard where Lincoln's Henry Villard says in regard to unfavorable father and stepmother rest, seven miles eriticisms concerning the Northern Pacific management: "I have not sold a share of Northern Pacific stock for myself for two known as Goose-Nest, says a writer in Albany, Sept. 20.—A wheel broke on a car years past.

Ansterdam, early this morning. The cars were strewn over the four tracks, blocking trains. Trains were sent over the West Shore.

Northern Pacific stock for myself for two years past.

"The Company has not sold a concollated of their final settlement on removing from no intention to sell any at present, deports of negotiations for the sale of Northern Pacific stock for myself for two September Centusy, the Lincolns made their final settlement on removing from Indiana.

Here Abraham Lincoln assisted his present has no occasion to sell bonds."

tather in "getting settled," as they called it. He helped him build a log cabin and cleared for him a patch of ground and cleared for him a patch of ground, and when be saw him "under headway" in the new country, bade him good-by and the new country, bade him good-by and started north afoot. He found employment not far from Springtield, Ill., where the active part of his early life was spent.

One very old man told me that he once rode up to Thomas Lincoln's cabin and inquired if he could spend the night there. He was informed that the house afforded only two beds, and one of these belonged to a son who was then at home; but if he would get the consent of this boy to take him in as a bedfellow he could stay.
